EDITORIAL NOTE

Another issue of Social Science Researcher is now before you. We seem to have decisively moved into an era that we may call post-COVID; the waves seem to have lost their destructive force and the academic world seems to be back to the classrooms. But then there seems a drought at least for us at the Social Science Researcher. The number of submissions came down. Nevertheless we decided to remain firm against taking in whatever came it.

We have Dhritimoni Mahanta, a Masters student at the Cotton University, Guwahati, giving us an interesting and provocative commentary on J.M.Coetzee's Waiting for the Barbarians while Dr. Kavita, teaching at the Kamala Nehru College, University of Delhi writing a crisp commentary bringing out the economy in reading two literary texts (Anjum Hasan and Uhs K.R.) which indeed makes interesting reading.

And as is our commitment, we will not hand out prescriptions; in other words, we are here to raise doubts and attempt at answering some of the questions that bother us. Ours is not an endeavour to arrive at final answers; and least of all to let the editor's opinion determine the contents and the arguments by our contributors.

Over to you dear scholars and look forward to your continued support by reading, sharing and contributing to this effort.

(Dr. V. Krishna Ananth)
